About this book

This picture book presents Ali as a pre-nursery student. He serves as a role model for the students at this level. In this picture book, Ali gets up early in the morning, eats breakfast, goes to school, listens to the teacher attentively, performs colouring activities in class, expresses feelings, and treats books with care. These are the manners necessary to teach at this level through pictures, as students learn by looking at what others do.

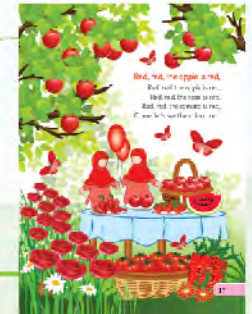

Since there are a number of activities, these are grouped under three sets. To equip students with rhyming and some basic vocabulary words, poems are added after each set.

Since Madani students are learning to read and they have nothing to do with words, all pictures are wordless. However, for the ease of teachers the text explaining the pictures is given after each set under the relevant activity. This page also revises all the pictures given in the previous set of activities.

After each set of activities and its text, one poem is added to create some fun for the students. Do not confuse with the text given here. It is not for students, rather for the teachers so they could read it while teaching in the class.

After going through this picture book, students should be able to:

- talk about themselves, tell their names
- respond to and verbally express feelings such as joy or sorrow
- enjoy looking through books
- hold, open and turn pages of a book with care
- understand right and left
- recognise sounds of animals
- recite rhymes with action
